

Construction of Tanks and Bunds

The construction of tanks and bunds is an essential aspect of water resource management, especially in agricultural and rural settings. Tanks and bunds are structures designed to store and manage water for various purposes, including irrigation, drinking water supply, flood control and groundwater recharge. Proper planning, design and construction of tanks and bunds are crucial for effective water resource management, soil conservation and sustainable agriculture.

